Paying it Forward

This year we decided to try and teach my three-year-old daughter Emilia what the true meaning of Christmas is. We took part in the Operation Christmas Child “build a shoebox” charity and she loved it! We explained to her that some children around the world might not have the means to receive a gift on Christmas and that we could help a little boy or girl receive a present Christmas morning. This made her so excited! She grasped the concept completely and wanted to go and buy some things for a little girl that needed them. We went shopping and filled the shoebox full of toys, hygienic products and school supplies. Emilia was so happy to do this and didn’t even ask for anything for herself. When we dropped off the shoebox you could see the pride in her face. She felt good doing something nice for someone else and that is the best gift of all. I was a very proud Daddy.
